INTRODUCTION

The Corcoran Artists’ Book Collection consists of approximately 300 artists’ books, which are works of art in book form. Although the artists’ book genre is generally thought to have originated in the lavishly illustrated books of 18th century engraver and printer William Blake, the format came into its own in the early and mid-20th century. In the United States the work of pop-artists and conceptual artists in the 1950’s and 1960’s brought widespread recognition to the genre. The Corcoran collection documents the works of these and later artists ranging from the late 1950’s to the present day.

Amassed over a period of several decades by the library of the former Corcoran College of Art + Design, the collection includes small-edition prints as well as one-of-a-kind art objects. In 2003 Corcoran Library director Mario Ascencio enacted a new acquisitions policy to build a collection focusing on themes of social consciousness and social justice. The George Washington University acquired the collection in 2014 along with the Corcoran College.

The artists’ books in the Corcoran collection are incredibly varied. Some are familiar, recognizable examples of books printed commercially or hand-bound using traditional techniques. Others reimagine the book as a work of architecture that the reader must assemble into miniature buildings or cityscapes (Tower by Beth Thielen, Muro by Hernández Santos), or as a treasure box containing not only text, but items of mysterious purpose and origin (Boxed spirits: Franny Znoey, and Everyman by Kerry McAleer-Keeler).

Some works are larger than life, eye-popping Technicolor artscapes (Nurse Duck Approaches and Enters and Leaves the Garden of Eden: A Short Story by William Rowe) while others are diminutive, non-descript, and even blank (Four blank books by JoAnne Schiavone). Of the authors represented, some are established and famous in the art community (such as pop-art icon Ed Ruscha) and in popular culture (Yoko Ono); other books are the work of budding artists from the Corcoran’s own College of Art + Design (District Almanac, ± One Percent).

Among the exceptional items in the collection are altered books, in which a traditional book becomes the canvas upon which an artist imposes new forms, words or images (Book gun by Robert The, Humument: A Treated Victorian Novel by Tom Phillips). Also of interest are a small number of exquisitely detailed children’s pop-up books (Wonderful Wizard of Oz illustrated by Robert Sabuda, Mommy? By Maurice Sendak).
